

MARSHALL AVERAGE 'AMERICAN CITIZEN'

Retirement Not Demotion, He Tells Senate in Farewell Address

PLEADS FOR OLD IDEALS

By the Associated Press

Washington, March 4.—Following is the text of the address of Vice President Marshall on his retirement from office:

"Very shortly I shall have ended my official life as the constitutional representative of the people. This movement, when it arrives, will not mark my demotion into the ranks of the average American citizen. Or I never arose above him.

"I sprang from the body of men who laid the foundations of the Republic. At my birth, the fate of the nation lay in the body below the gouty chin. The cause of reconstruction, when it arrived, will not mark my demotion into the ranks of the average American citizen. Or I never arose above him.

"I may have failed, but I have tried to keep the faith. I have not failed, so far as the interests of my government are concerned, at all times.

"The rules rest upon the nation of Independence and the conservation of the United States.

Truth Undeceiving and Loyal

"To my mind there is no loyalty. The forms under which the principles of the public acts are manifested, may be changed to suit the convenience of each, but the underlying idea does not. The truth is unchanging and eternal. What was so when the masters sang together will be so when the song of the American is sung.

"I have been dedicated to the inalienable rights of man in life, in liberty and to the pursuit of happiness, can find its perfect embodiment only in representatives, brave and strong.

enough to rise above the ambitions, passions and prejudices of individuals and groups. Representative government was designed to guarantee these inalienable rights of men through the enactment and enforcement of laws designed to preserve the natural equity and the justice. Governments go to work before their statesmen shut cloud their shields; but let a friendly enemy pass the ford.

"I freely grant the right of this people to change our form of government and to alter or abolish it at any time; but if it is to be done, let it be done directly and directly so that all of us may know it. The old faith has already too many sleek and smiling friends asking of it, 'Is it well with thee, my brother?'

Appeals for Old Ideals

"While the old order endures let representatives represent the old ideals; let it be understood that they are not mere hollows, subject to call for legislative cracked ice every time the election of a deluge of greed, gambling and immodesty fed the fever of frenzied need.

"The life is more than meat and the body more than raiment. It is of minor importance who holds the reins of power, but it is important that the body below the gouty chin. The cause of reconstruction, when it arrived, will not mark my demotion into the ranks of the average American citizen. Or I never arose above him.

"It is no new religion we need. Our creed should be One Lord, one faith, one Baptism, the Lord of Justice, who was with Washington at Valley Forge, Grant and Lee at Appomattox, Pershing and the Allies at the Rhine. The faith that, under a republican form of government alone democracy permanently can endure—the baptism of that spirit which will not be content until no man is above the penitents and no man below the penitent of one kind.

"It is enough, brothers, too much to suggest anything else. For either you are satisfied with a system which has changed the course of the world's history, I have been with you to the end of them with a feeling of deepest gratitude to you all. You have given me, countless unremunerated years, friendship, charity, which has been a comfort to me. The odor of your friendship will sweeten any air that I may breathe. Not one of you can wish for himself a kindlier fate than to his office by tomorrow.

than I would give you if I were omnipotent.

"I go as you remain. I leave with the same inarticulate cry in my soul with which you came to you; me, however, the more remissive are for the American, but it has, I fear, myriad elements. To some it means broad acres and fertile fields; to many opportunity for personal preference; to a thoughtless few, the right to utter every vagrant word without fear of punishment; to the half-educated that democracy should be governed as soon by the infant's cry as by the prophet's warning.

Appeals for Perpetual Reforms

"But to me it is but the composite voice of all the good and wise and self-sacrificing souls who toil or tread the soil, calling for that liberty which is the only answer to preaching that doctrine which seeks not only to bind the mind, but also the heart, warning us by the memory of the dead and the hope of the unborn to close our ears to the mouthings of every pernicious reformer who tells us that the way to success is the complete or complete victory of one party.

"The truth is that the spirit which under a republican form of government alone democracy permanently can endure—the baptism of that spirit which will not be content until no man is above the penitents and no man below the penitent of one kind.

"It is no new religion we need. Our creed should be One Lord, one faith, one Baptism, the Lord of Justice, who was with Washington at Valley Forge, Grant and Lee at Appomattox, Pershing and the Allies at the Rhine. LAY MINES FROM PLANES

New Method Invented by American Subject of Experiment

Washington, March 4.—(By A. P.)

A new method of planting mine fields, involving the use of aircraft and a special type mine equipped with a parachute, has been the subject of recent experiments conducted by the navy in Chesapeake bay. It was learned today.

The mine used is the invention of Charles Kee, mechanical engineer, of Portsmouth, Va. The mechanism consists of the mine, anchor, cable and silk parachute.

Two or three planes, carrying a number of mines, can be sent over the area to be mined and the devices dropped at regular intervals. The parachute causes the descent to the exact spot selected, and the mine, which sinks into the water, the anchor is detached and float rises to sink later. The mine anchor sinks to the bottom, carrying the mine with it, and a predetermined amount of cable is automatically released, allowing the mine to rise to the required depth from the surface. Mines of any weight may be used up to the lifting capacity of the aircraft.
